Relaxing Sail at Harrison Pond

No, this is not a new R/C action figure built by Kevin Hamilton but an actual boy, whose name I'm told is Oliver, sailing a boat at Harrison Pond. Thanks to Bill Sturrock for providing the pictures

From The Bridge

March is upon us and we look forward hopefully to spring weather with a little more warmth and sunshine at the pond and lake. Looking at the weather patterns east of us we are fortunate to have chosen this area as home.

I'd like to remind members that have not paid their dues please try and do so as soon as practical or perhaps send Barry a note to let him know you will not be returning.

I visited the Nanaimo Club yesterday and enjoyed coffee with their group. The lake yesterday morning was windless and those that thought they would get a sail in needed a push to get back to the wharf. They have added a couple of new bench areas to put their boats on and benches out on the wharf to enjoy the sun. They showed me their new club boats that have been built – they will replace the ready to run boats that they were using last year.

Beaver Fever is coming up at the end of March – this event attracts boats from up island, lower mainland and Washington State. Please try and offer your assistance over the two days or just come out and watch some hopefully fast sailing and good competition. The IOM website has a link to the Seattle bulletin – first time I've read through these and some interesting information in there for those starting to be interested in sailing. We have seen two or three new ones coming to Harrison.

Tidy up the boats and perhaps consider updating those old batteries – they do get tired and you can be surprised how a new battery or a properly charged one can make for a more enjoyable trip to the pond. We have witnessed a few frustrated members arriving only to find the battery didn't charge properly or a loose connection is just waiting until you have reached the middle of the pond.

Sailing School

A group of members interested in improving their sailboats met last Saturday to go over basic boat building, setup and tuning processes. About 8 people got together and over the course of about 3 hours we covered a lot of ground with a goal of making the boats more reliable, easier to set up and then simpler to work on to get to where the boat(s) will be fun to sail.

Lots of good discussion, good questions and hopefully good answers. At the end of the meeting it was decided that we should do this again. A date hasn't been established yet but in roughly a month's time a second school day will happen. It is not a prerequisite that you have to have been at this first session to come to the next one so keep an eye out for a notice of the next session and come join in.
